

HOW CAN SOMETHING SO SILLY MAKE YOUR CHILD A TOP STUDENT, SOCIALLY SECURE, AND ULTIMATELY SUCCESSFUL?

...and it's barely the price of lunch

Dear Fellow Parent,

Six months ago, my neighbor was telling me about the difficulties her 7-year-old was having in school. She was in tears because the teacher had recommended that her daughter repeat grade two.

I felt for them. She's a great Mom and her daughter tries so hard.

That night I couldn't fall asleep. A lot of questions swam through my mind...about my own daughter.

Why are some kids smart in school and others struggle? Why are some kids shy while others are confident? Are talented kids born that way?

Sure, we're all different. We all have our strengths and weaknesses.

But why?

The next day I started digging for answers. And what I found, blew me away.

WANT YOUR CHILDREN TO HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY OF ATTENDING HARVARD?

GIVE THEM A DOZEN WATER BALLOONS
...THEN SIT DOWN AND RELAX

I used to think kids were born with their abilities. Like if my child happened to be a genius or something – that was the way she was born.

But it's not true.

Eric Knudsen, Ph.D., Professor of Neurobiology at Stanford University, and a member of The National Scientific Council on the Developing Child at Harvard, says early experiences can permanently change the brain's architecture and make it easier or harder for a person to learn in the future.

From the council's report:

"Both brain architecture and developing abilities are built "from the bottom up," with simple circuits and skills providing the scaffolding for more advanced circuits and skills over time."

"The development of increasingly complex skills and their underlying circuits builds on the circuits and skills that were formed earlier. Through this process, early experiences create a foundation for lifelong learning, behavior, and both physical and mental health." (www.developingchild.net)

Dr. William Sears, author of 30 books on childcare, agrees. In his book, The Successful Child, he states that

"Bigger and better brains become that way by making more and better neural connections during the early years."

It's like this:

Building a brain is just like building a house. A well-built house is worry free and inexpensive to maintain. However, a poorly built house has no end of problems full of heartache and stress.

The only difference is that you can rebuild a house. But you can't re-build a brain. The foundation for higher learning happens during 0 to 10 years-old. After that, it's extremely difficult to re-wire neural connections.

Better to get it built right at the beginning!

WANT YOUR CHILD TO PLAY THE PIANO, WIN AT TENNIS, AND BLAZE THROUGH MATH AND SPELLING?

The bright minds of child development at Harvard and Stanford University recommend a rich and varied environment of games and activities that stimulate your children's senses, challenge their abilities, offer fun and reward, and a chance to explore their world, themselves, and their social structure.

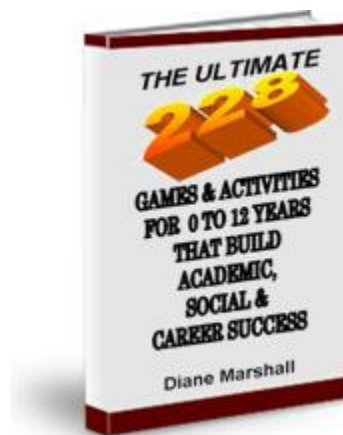

From Dr. Sears:

"Play enhances physical, cognitive, social and emotional skills. Children also learn lessons during play that will pertain to other areas of their lives as well. It's a child's chance to practice the many skills that they have learned in "real life" and apply them in safe and fun settings."

This is what got me excited.

Sure, games and activities are a source of happiness for your children now...but I didn't realize the effect of these experiences would be a foundation success down the road!

We can safely say that play is no laughing matter! It is necessary for enhancing your child's development on all levels.

I created this book for my daughter. It's 92 pages of never ending fun and activity for your child. Just about everyday for the past year we've done something that came from it.

And you know what I feel the most?

Relief.

Call me a nut, but I often fall asleep at night thinking about all the new neural connections she made that day and how that's going to help her live a better life.

(By the way, did you know that a two-year old makes about 2 million neural connections...every second?)

THE MOMMY GROUP TOLD ME THEY WOULD PAY $50 PER BOOK

After putting this fully searchable e-book together, I showed it to the other moms.

After much hullabaloo they all agreed they would pay $50.00. I didn't believe them and told them so.

(I thought they were just being nice – after all these are average to low income households!)

But one mom put it like this:

“I spend more than that just taking them to a movie!”

And she's right. When you consider price of admission, lunch, and transportation – that's $50 – for just one activity!!

Over 90% of the games and activities in this book cost nothing. The rest, like the arts and crafts, require items from the dollar store.

Another mom insisted,

“This is the kind of thing that will entertain my kids and save me money at the same time.”

“And what about all the work you put into it?” another wanted to know. “It would take me months to gather all that information. I'd gladly pay you $50.00 to save me the time!”

Wow, I thought. Maybe I could charge $50.00 dollars for it.

But it didn't seem right. You see, I did this for my daughter. Being able to sell it now is a bonus.

And besides that, I want parents to have this resource. That makes me feel good. Like I'm doing my part. I decided then and there that I was going to price the book as low as I possibly could.

So I crunched the numbers and whittled it down.

At the next mommy group meeting they asked me how much I'd decided to sell it for. “$25 seems reasonable to me,” I said. They all started laughing and told me I was crazy.

Okay, then I'm crazy. But like I said – if you have children, I want you to have this book.

$25 is a fair price but I want this to be a real bargain (see below).

Especially since

DON'T LOOK FOR ANYTHING LIKE IT ON THE INTERNET OR IN STORES

Sure, there are game and activity books out there. I've bought a few myself. Most of them have a bunch of new and strange games that are complicated to learn. So they just sit on the shelf day after day.

The games and activities you'll find here are tried and true. That means your child will love them...as millions have before them.

Order now, because I can't say for sure how long I'll be able to sell it this low. Like everything else, my server, website and keyword expenses are on the rise.

Remember, keep the book and all the bonuses if you're not satisfied – and I'll refund every penny.

Wishing you and your family the very best.
